The House on the Sacred Lake and other Bolivian Dreams

Dame Margaret Anstee

former Under Secretary General at the United Nations

Margaret Anstee fell in love with Bolivia at first sight in 1957 and vowed it would be her next UN post. After five and a half stirring years there as Head of Mission in the 1960s, her UN career took her to many other countries and continents but her heart remained in Bolivia. When democracy was restored in 1982 President Hernan Siles Zuazo asked the Secretary General to appoint her as his Special Representative to help restore the country's international standing after years of military dictatorship, a role she continued to fulfil, along with many others, for the next decade.

After her retirement in 1993, she made her home on the shores of Lake Titicaca and has continued to advise successive governments in an honorary capacity. She will tell the story of her adventures, and misadventures, over the last twenty-five years, building a house and living in an Andean community, while at the same time being involved in some of the dramatic events of Bolivia's recent history. She just returned from Bolivia at the end of August.
